TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN;

On November 12, 1986, I signed a criminal complaint against my ex-husband, Mark S. Gietzen, concerning the battery that took place on July 6, 1986, I regret that the information I gave the court was incomplete. Although the incident did happen at the time and place stated, the incident did not happen exactly as was alleged. Actually, I returned home on the morning of July 6, 1986, a few hours after I had attempted to take my own life, by overdose of a combination of mind-altering substances. I was still under their influence at the time of the incident, and I do not recall the exact details of the incident. However, I do recall that I acted in an aggressive and destructive manner toward household property and then physically attacked my ex-husband with objects, which started the incident. Immediately after the fight, I intentionally broke a window, bruising and cutting myself, while Mark and the children were in another room.

Prior to this incident, Mark had never once touched me in anger during our entire courtship and marriage. I now regret signing the complaint against my ex-husband. I'm in the process of rebuilding my own life and wish to present the truth in this matter.
